Re: FirePro (Ireland), Fire Stopping Training.

To whom it concerns,

Currently there is no regulation or mandatory training required within the Passive Fire Protection industry and no regulated installation courses for installers to attend.

However the installer that has a third party accreditation has a Third Party Company that can attend site on a regular basis and ascertain if the company and individuals within are adhering to manufactures installations details.

Building Regulations states Independent schemes of certification and accreditation of installers can provide confidence that the required level of performance for a system, product, component or structure can be achieved.

From a Manufactures perspective as a PFP manufacture we can say that FirePro (Ireland) have undergone manufacturers installation familiarisation training and product application awareness through our tested applications and in-depth install guides with the Kingspan Safire range of PFP products.

Installation works have been inspected for compliance to manufacturers details on numerous occasions over multiple projects and the works have been found to be of the highest quality and the installers are competent in carrying out these works on those dates as visited.

I can also add that Fire Pro are members of ASFPI, IAPFP (Irish Association of Passive Fire Protection), Warrington Firas, VCR (Voluntary Construction Register) and the CIF (Construction Industry Federation). If more clarification is required, we would recommend that you contact these bodies and ascertain what the required competence would be to align with these bodies.

I trust you find this to your satisfaction however if you should need any further information or clarification, please do not hesitate to contact us directly.

Yours faithfully,

Richard Thompson FSIDip FSICert
